

As a concerned consumer and some who treasures their right to privacy in their home I am writing to inform you that I oppose the weakening of Indiana's privacy law. I do not wish or need to have Bank or Credit card corporations calling me in order to sell their product based upon a so called relationship which they claim they may have. If I as a consumer wish to use their products I can contact them if the need arises. Their desire to harass and intrude on my privacy and all hours of day or night is irresponsible and only to serve their needs to increase the debt load of the people of the United States. It is beholden on you at the FCC to protect our interests over the interests of Corporate America and for once and all put them in their place. I ask that you deny their request.

Sincerely Yours,

Lewis C. Jones
